What is the honey-soufflé?

TECHNOLOGY OF THE HONEY-SOUFFLE

This technology has long conquered the hearts of European honey consumers but this is a novelty on the Russian market which also pleased a lot of customers.

The technology to obtaining honey-soufflé was invented in Canada in 1928 by I. J. Dyson, a professor of beekeeping. Honey is mixed for a long time in a certain mode, after which it is kept at low temperatures, thereby forming and fixing its delicate consistency. All useful properties of honey are conserved as the temperature regime is strictly controlled.

Peroni's innovation was to add dried fruits, berries, nuts and even spices to honey, turning the usual product into an incredible treat and dessert. Thanks to cooperation with the best chefs of Russia we constantly improve the range of our tastes, making the product even more attractive.

THE COMPANY'S CONCEPTION

Our dream is for Russian products to take a worthy place in the world market and be associated with high-quality natural products. We signed each of our boxes "Made in Russia" and we are very proud of it.

We managed to turn such a traditional product as honey into a delicacy, a dessert that is both healthy and also delicious and elegant. We created a new gift format for any holiday – now, instead of a bottle of wine, people happily present a beautiful jar of honey or a honey set. And such a gift will bring you happiness and surprises regardless the age and social status.

Increase the attractiveness of your shops and get additional income by selling a unique and delicious honey-soufflé.
